PREPARATIONS MADE FOR THE EXECUTION.

Preparations for the execution had been completed. The scaffold had been inspected and the iron weight attached to the our protection, we think the English minister and the iron weight attached to the beam of the drop. The manilla hemp rope had been procured from Baltimore, atretched by having a 150-pound sandbag fastened to it and the noose had been formed. The long barred windows that admit light to that part of the jail in which hangings occur had been curtained with black cambric.

The condemned man had been informed of these preparations and was apparently resigned.

In the application for pardon the district attorney would recommend no leniency, neither would the judge, and it was only after an earnest pleading with the President today by Mr. Fergusson and the officer that the President came to the conclusion which gladdened the heart of at least one man and lifted a burden from his counsel.

THE CASE OF GEN. CARR.

Has the President a Right to Retire Him Without His Consent?

The case of Brig. Gen. Eugene Carr is exciting special interest in army circles just at present, as it raises the question of the right of the President to retire an officer without his consent. Gen. Carr was appointed to his consent. Gen. Carr was appointed to his present rank a year ago, and will retire by operation of law next year. It is said that he was appointed with the understanding that he should retire voluntarily before the 4th of next March, in order to give an opportunity for the appointment of a younger officer in his place. On January 31 Maj. Gen. Schofield recommended that Gen. Carr be retired and that Col. W. P. Carlin be promoted to the vacancy and at once retired so that a younger colonel might at once retired so that a younger colonel might be appointed brigadier general. Gen. Carr wrote the President protesting against the approval of Gen. Schofield's recommendation.

I have time before the departure of the mail steamer only to state briefly the additional reasons which caused us to assume temporary protectorate of these islands. The provisional government must have time to organize a new police and to discipline a small military force. When the meharchy died by its own force, we have a military force in the islands.

The club believed that Washington was no military force in the islands. Barber was highly pleased. His countenance was asolid expanse of smile, and he shook the reporter's hand violently. He was loquacious and poured out a torrent of words descriptive of the wrongfulness of his conviction; the perjury of Lee, on whose testimony mainly the verdict of guilty had been rendered.

HE PROTESTED HIS INNOCENCE.

He said he had been sentenced to die for a crime that had never been committed. The drowning was either accidental or suicide, and that the man who had sworn that he had seen him (Barber) throw the woman into the canal was in bed and asieep at the time the drowning occurred.

He did not speak of these things bitterly. He was too full of joy and mental relief to feel any must be disciplined men. So far the provisional government has been sustained by the uprising and union of the business men and best citizens. Eankers, merchants, clerks, here. Many of the cracks entered in professional men, respectable mechanics have stood manfully by the new government and kept guard by night. This kind of defense must give place to a small reliable military force. Time is the necessity of the new government. There are 40,000 Chinese and Japanese on the islands, and evil-disposed the big spring handicaps would receive their preparation on the lvy City track, explained Mr. Pettus, and the people of Washington and Baltimore would be given opportunities in racing which had never before been enjoyed by Another important reason for our action is the possibility of the arrival here of a British legitimate racing as would be a revelation to the local racing world. The starter and judges, said Mr. Pettus, had not yet been finally determined upon, but they would be men of ability will not attempt to insist that his government mined upon, but they would be men of ability and unquestioned integrity.

A force of 100 or more men are now at work on the track and grounds of the Ivy City course, and everything will be put in first-class shape. Several carloads of horses will arrive from the north today, and not less than 250 horses will be stabled at the track on the opening day. This number will be rapidly increased as the season advances and before the meeting is over it is expected that almost has the right to interfere while our flag is over the government building. Mr. McMillan, after a careful examination of the measure, is satisfied that the bill is a good one and will meet the requirements of the District. He is therefore anxious that it should receive attention at once, and if his desires are carried out the bill will be favorably reported to the Senate without an amendment.

Some of those who are desirous of having the bill amended have asked that a hearing be given them, but the committee feels that it is sufficiently acquainted with the needs of the District on this question and the hearings will not, therefore, be given.
